

MOLLY BURROWS

Molly Burrows (b. Munich, 2002) is an artist and workshop facilitator based in South London. Her practice uses abstraction as a means of accessibility; by breaking down the human form into simplified shapes- panels of paint, clay, ink, or paper- she is able to tell stories through body language and share her techniques with others. Her work depicts individuals who are content amongst their natural environments, often blending into and becoming a part of their backgrounds.

Her commitment to accessibility extends beyond her practice and workshops. She creates resources for exhibitions and galleries in order to make contemporary art spaces more welcoming. These booklets offer insight into artists' processes and practical advice for entering the art world.
